This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFACE

THE Mastery of Words provides a course in Spelling for all grades. Book One is intended for the first five grades; Book Two is arranged for Grades Six, Seven, and Eight. Books One and Two are combined in a complete edition, to which this preface relates.

Children do not learn to spell through merely repeating in order the letters which make up words. Some children misspell because their pronunciation is slovenly. They do not hear the correct sound of the word. They must learn to hear truly. Others misspell because they do not clearly visualize the form of the word. They must be taught to give energetic attention to the printed form — to see clearly. But even then children fail to spell correctly if they are completely ignorant of the phonetic value of the letters which make up the word. There is no remedy for such failures except constant attention to the sounds of letters in words.

The Mastery of Words develops these powers. It provides for constant repetition of the ordinary phonograms which are regular in the majority of words. It secures clear enunciation, thus helping to overcome bad habits in speaking. It teaches the pupil to analyze words so that he is conscious of the real problem to be grappled with in spelling; and all the way along it provides exercises which prepare for the use of the dictionary.

Further, its lessons keep in mind that, after school days are over, spelling is used only in writing. The vocabulary of writing is limited; the vocabulary of speech is broad and varied. Drill in spelling should emphasize the words which are necessary for writing.

The vocabulary of the Mastery of Words is based upon the most recent and conclusive investigations of the Russell Sage Foundation, in charge of Dr. Leonard P. Ayres, by Professor Cook of the University of Colorado, by Professor O'Shea of the University of Wisconsin, Dr. Jones of the University of South Dakota, and others. These scholars have clearly shown that spelling books of the past have given undue attention to words which never appear in the student's vocabulary, still less in the essential vocabulary of writing. The thousand words in the Ayres list, proved to be the most commonly used in writing, are therefore taught and stressed in the Mastery of Words.

The author has emphasized the "type words," which are presented over and over again. The type words are purely phonetic — that is, they represent a common phonogram. Essential words which vary from the type are selected for special attention. Beginning with the third grade, black letter type is used to call attention to these words. By frequent review of these lists and of the type words, the pupil will master a very large group of words needed by everybody, yet which are frequently misspelled.

The deadly monotony of the old spelling book has been largely responsible for the lack of interest in spelling. The Mastery of Words has secured in a marked degree variety linked with repetition. The forms of the lessons are varied, and innumerable devices make spelling a live, interesting, and pleasurable study.

The appendix should be used by the older children and by the teacher, for reference. It provides lists, tables, and summaries, including the valuable Ayres list. Teachers should use the appendix freely. The author also urges frequent spelling and pronouncing matches, which provide drill in the form most enjoyed by school children.

After school days are over the pupil must be his own teacher. If he knows phonetics and can read the dictionary, he will be wholly independent. The Mastery of Words provides him with this double power.

PLAN OF THE COURSE

The First Grade must teach children to read. Children are introduced for the first time to the printed word. To distinguish one word from another, they must carefully observe word forms. The teacher selects words already known by sound. In reading, the children connect the sound and the form of the word. This act is also the first step in spelling. Learning to read is therefore a foundation for learning to spell.

On this account many teachers postpone the definite lessons in spelling until the middle of the first school year, or even later. Spelling is not really postponed or omitted, but emphasis is centered upon recognizing the form of words, pronouncing, and copying the words.

But the form of the word is mastered by repeating it in writing or by naming the letters. Unless the letters are learned, the child knows words only as wholes, and cannot recognize new words by the help of familiar ones. The alphabet must be taught.

The Mastery of Words therefore introduces the alphabet at the beginning of the definite work in spelling. It is presented with the help of pictured objects. Every letter is related to a type word, whose initial sound is the sound of the letter (exception, x). By frequent and repeated drill in naming the pictures and pronouncing these names in two parts (initial sound and the remainder of the word), the letter is associated with the sound which it chiefly or always represents.

(The type-words apple and zebra, used to teach the initial sounds, a and z, need not be spelled until the pupil is further advanced. They are enclosed in parenthesis to indicate this delay.)

During the first grade, the pupil must name the letters in order, must find them when named out of order, and must sound as well as name the letter. He then realizes that words are made up of letters, all of which have some relation to the sound of the word. This is the foundation of all spelling.

Digitized by Google

The words then selected for spelling present common phonograms in which every letter is sounded, and thus review the initial sounds. No day should pass without the repetition of the alphabet in order, and the quick naming of letters as found in different words.

Many short words (verbs, prepositions, and pronouns chiefly) must also be taught, in order that sentences may be used. Is, has, he, to, in, etc., must be shown in sentences, for they have no meaning except in relation to other words. These sentences should, when possible, include some word from the day's reading.

The teacher may adjust the length of the lesson to the ability of her class, for classes in first grade differ much in their rate of progress. The lists of words may be extended at will. It is always a good plan to add a word learned in reading which is in some way related to the spelling lesson of the day. One sentence at a time is enough for the first grade unless the class is very active and able. Typical sentences are inserted to be copied by the children. Two new words suffice for a lesson, if the familiar words are reviewed daily.

For the Second Grade the work of the first grade should be reviewed. Now the silent letter is introduced (final e). This brings in the long vowel phonogram and the fact that some letters stand for more than one sound — a difficult fact in English spelling.

New phonograms combining vowels are taught, as in book, lay, boy, oil, etc., and consonant sounds in combination, as wh, th, etc. The vowels are emphasized over and over in attractive ways, as on page 18, where the short phonograms are sung to the tune of Do, Re, Mi, Fa, Sol. Occasional sentences for copying and for dictation suggest types; such sentences should be related to the reading lesson. Phonetic words are presented in groups. Final ing and er are added, and the third sound of the vowel which accompanies r.

As in the first grade, daily reviews should keep in mind the sounds of all the letters, including the two or three sounds of the vowels. The alphabet should frequently be recited or sung in order. Children should name rhymes for every phonogram and extend the lists of phonetic words.

Grade Three reviews the vowels in their common combinations, presents y and ies, emphasizes the long vowel and the silent letter, carefully studies the consonants presenting two sounds (a stumbling block in spelling), analyzes words containing x and cks, z, and sounding like z, compares ee and ea, introduces essential sight words, presents more words of two syllables, reviews all the familiar types, adds d and ed, and drills upon difficult combinations, as ould and ought. Word building increases thoughtful attention; more silent letters are studied; a careful chart reviews the three chief vowel sounds. Words from the Ayres list are used. The entire primary work lays the basis for accurate and independent spelling.

For Grade Four and following, a page of exercises is presented for each week. Four advance lessons of different kinds are given on each page. The drill exercise which appears at the bottom of the page beneath a waved line reviews the essential combinations of letters and the various vowel sounds.

The author advises a review of the entire page on the fifth day of the week, and that every ninth week should be given to review.

The words in certain lessons are arranged horizontally instead of in vertical lists. This varies the form of the lesson and approaches more nearly the common arrangement of words.

The author deplores the presentation of all words in syllables, in a spelling book. Words should be studied as they appear in ordinary reading. Attention to syllables, as phonetic power increases and word analysis continues, is secured in this book by presenting occasional groups of words separated into syllables and also by giving specific lessons from time to time as progress in word building requires.

Such lessons can be extended by dividing into syllables words from the reading book and by reference to the dictionary. The words to be divided must, however, conform to the phonetic knowledge of the class at the time. The author believes that the practice provided in this book will suffice for syllabication.

All words should be used in sentences so that their meaning is clear. This should be the common everyday practice. Typical dictation exercises are provided to secure such use of words. Verse and prose alternate with exercises in the use of homonyms. These exercises must be varied according to the need of the class. No set exercise printed in a book has half the value of the dictation exercise which is related to the daily lesson and is made by the teacher and pupils together. These lessons, growing out of the everyday work and fitting the environment of the pupil, are most essential.

A valuable exercise is the study of the lesson by teacher and class together. This is particularly true in advanced grades and with the lessons for dictionary study, including derivatives. Pupils must learn how to study as well as how to recite.

Book Two, for Grades Six, Seven, and Eight, builds upon the foundation laid in the preceding grades, and works steadily to secure intelligent use of the dictionary as well as the power to spell. It reviews the vowel sounds, emphasizes the long sound of the vowels, presents, in "black letter," words difficult to spell, arranges in group words which have common elements, maintains the emphasis on the Ayres List and provides dictionary exercises.

The first lesson for every week in the seventh grade is made up of words from the Ayres list, while in the eighth grade the first lesson of the week is a dictionary lesson.

Note the repeated exercises for arrangement in alphabetical order. Lists, as telephone lists, are arranged in alphabetical order; letters must be filed in this way.

Teachers should bear in mind that thoughtful attention to words not only insures good spelling, but it exceeds good spelling by developing in the pupils the power to teach themselves.

GRADES FOUR AND FIVE

A TALK TO PUPILS

"WHY SHOULD I LEARN TO SPELL?"

"Because you wish to write. One may be able to read without spelling, but one cannot write without spelling. The simplest letter to your friend calls for written words. If you write, you must spell; if you cannot spell, your letter shows it, and makes you ashamed.

You can teach yourself to spell, if you will remember three things:

(1) To look sharply at the printed word so that you will remember its form.

(2) To listen intently to the spoken word so that you will remember its sound.

(3) To learn all the sounds of all the letters so that you will know at once how to pronounce any new word that you meet in your reading.

Be your own teacher. Some day you will be glad that you know how to spell."

Digitized by Google

HOW TO STUDY YOUR LESSON

Look carefully at each word of the lesson.

Pronounce the word to yourself.

Use the word in a sentence to show its meaning.

Think each sound of the word in order.

Think each letter of the word in order.

If the word has more than one syllable, separate it into syllables.

If the word is hard to spell, try to find out what is hard in it.

Notice the silent letters, if it contains any.

See if you can write the word from memory without looking at it again.

Think of other words that rhyme with it. Are they all spelled like it?

After you have studied every word of the lesson, pronounce the entire lesson slowly and clearly. Decide which words are the hardest. Study these words again earnestly.

After you have learned the new lesson, read over the last four lessons to keep the words in mind.

If any word in the lesson is new to you, try to use it in talking. Then it becomes your own; it belongs to you, and will help you in expressing your thoughts.

Teach yourself to spell.

To the Teacher. This page presents the black-letter words of the preceding eight weeks. Be sure that every word on the page can be readily used in sentences by the class. Particularly, secure prompt and rapid use of the phonograms at the bottom of the page.

Note. These foregoing suggestions for the lessons of the first quarter of the Grade Four may be followed throughout the year by substituting the words appearing in the new lessons. They may also serve as a guide for review exercises in Grade Five. Frequent matches — pronouncing, rhyming, and spelling — should be introduced. The essential thing is to require the pupil to make his own lists illustrating the sound or combination studied. These lists are much more valuable than those which are prepared for him.

APPENDIX

The following pages present definitions, tables, rules, and exercises for reference, drill, and review. Abundant material is presented for phonetic drill, since many pupils in grammar grades have completely forgotten the elementary drill provided when learning to read. To this omission in their study of words may be traced many, if not most, of the mistakes in spelling. The author therefore urges daily drill in some selected phonetic exercise.

Various exercises are suggested to prevent the monotony of the ordinary drill in spelling. Teachers will select exercises according to the need of their class. Much of the material in the drill tables and summaries can be used in rapid contests. The phonetic values of words should be as familiar to the pupil as the multiplication table. By the use of these drill tables this may be accomplished.

I. HOW TO PRONOUNCE

WORDS, LETTERS, AND SOUNDS

Spoken words are made up of sounds. Every word may be separated into its simple sounds. In "can" are three sounds. In "step" are four sounds. In "breath" are four sounds.

All spoken sounds are made by the vocal organs. The vocal cords in the throat tighten when we wish to speak, and enable us to make a tone. Sounds which are made of pure voice or tone are called vowel sounds. Sounds which are made with the help of the lips, teeth, tongue, or palate are called consonant sounds. In some consonant sounds the voice is always heard; in others, merely the breath. The sound is a whisper.

All consonant sounds made of pure breath are called aspirates. Those in which the voice is heard are called subvocals.

Slowly sound every letter in the alphabet, and show which are vocals (pure voice), which are aspirates, and which are subvocals.

Written words are composed of letters. In some languages every letter stands for a sound. In the English language a word may contain one or more silent letters, as "calm," "lamb," "tongue." Furthermore, a letter may stand for different sounds, as a in "cat" and in "call." It is also true that the same sound may be represented by different letters; thus, a in "warm" and o in "storm" represent the same sound.

Letters that represent the vowel sounds are called vowels. Letters which represent the aspirates or subvocals are called consonants. Two vowels combined in one syllable form a diphthong, as oi in "oil" or ou in "out."

Knowledge of spoken sounds is called phonetics or phonics. No one spells correctly without some knowledge of phonetics.

Digitized by Google

SYLLABLES AND ACCENT

Some words are spoken with one impulse of the voice, as "big," "wish," "shall," "have": these are words of one syllable. Other words require two such impulses or more, as "merry," "willing," "careful."

Words like the first group are called monosyllables. A word of two such parts is called a dissyllable, of three such divisions a trisyllable, and four or more a polysyllable.

If you listen carefully to poetry, you will observe that every line may be separated into a given number of syllables. Reading poetry will help you to recognize syllables.

When we read or speak, some words are more emphatic than others. Our meaning determines the emphasis. In the same way, certain syllables in a word are more emphatic than others. The emphasis upon a syllable of a word is called accent. If the word is very long, it has both a primary and a secondary accent.

Read a sentence without emphasizing any word or accenting any syllable; then read again, with natural emphasis and accent. Observe the difference.

Some words are derived from other words, as "boyish" from "boy," "teacher" from "teach," "responsive" from "respond." Such words are called derivatives, while the simple or elementary word from which they are derived is called the root word.

Sometimes a syllable is added to the root to form the derivative, as "teach," "teaching." This syllable placed after a word is called a suffix. Sometimes a syllable is placed before the root word to form a derivative, as "do," "undo." Such a syllable is called a prefix.

DIACRITICAL MARKS

As Used in Webster's International Dictionary

In the English language there are more than forty sounds, but in the alphabet there are only twenty-six letters.

Since all the sounds must be represented by these twenty-six letters, it is often necessary to add some sign to show exactly what sound is indicated. Every vowel stands for at least three sounds, while the vowel a has six different sounds.

Diacritical marks are used to show which sound of a letter is intended. These marks are in constant use in the dictionary.

Diacritical Marks Used with Vowels

Macron: cāne, mēte, pīne, nōte, cūbe, flȳ
Breve: căn, mĕt, pĭn, nŏt, cŭb, babў
Tilde: hẽr, gĩrl, wõrk
Circumflex: câre, cûrl
Two dots above the letter: stär, machïne
Two dots beneath the letter: wa̤ll, Ju̇ne, mo̤ve
One dot above the letter: fȧst, sȯn
One dot below the letter: wo̩lf, pu̩sh

Diacritical Marks Used with Consonants

s (= z) is marked s̱: has̱ x (= gz) is marked x̱: ex̱ist
c (= s) is marked ç: çent
ch (= sh) is marked c̭h: mac̭hine th (subvocal) is marked th: this g (= j) is marked ġ: ġinġer
n (= ng) is marked n̲: in̲k

Marks Used with Obscure Vowels in Unaccented Syllables

In unaccented syllables, short Italian a is obscure in sound. This is identified in the dictionary by using italics with the same mark as that of the clear sound (*ȧ*sleep).

The long vowel sound is more or less obscured in unaccented syllables, and is somewhat shortened. This halfway sound is indicated by a line over the macron (senāte, librāry, ēvent, pō̇etic, ō̇bey, ūnite).

The short vowel in a final unaccented syllable, as "final," "novel," "comet," is somewhat obscured. It retains its same mark, the breve, but is written in italics to indicate the loss of force and clearness (finăl).

Unaccented syllables containing obscure sounds are a source of many errors in spelling. Carefully study every word to detect and observe the unaccented vowels. A list of such words is given below.

secret	distance	appetite
honest	difference	blizzard
organ	silence	elevate
eleven	furnace	magazine
equal	gallant	palaces

Table of Equivalent Vowel Sounds

ȧ = ŏ	wash — odd	ea = ē	bean — complete
ey = ā	they — ate	oa = ō	goat — mote
ê = â	there — care	ew = ū	dew — duty
ã = ẽ	liar — miner	ew = o͞o	brew — brood
ï = ē	police — even	igh = ī	light — hide
ĩ = ẽ	first — stern	ay = ā	hay — late
ȯ = ŭ	son — sun	eigh = ā	eight — ate
o̤ = o͝o	woman — wood	ei = ē	receive — recede
o̤ = o͞o	do — choose	ie = ē	belief — impede
ô = a̤	horse — warn	ow = ō	arrow — hero
ŏ = ẽ	minor — miner	ou = ō	pour — pore
u̇ = o͞o	rule — fool	ui = ū	suit — use
u̇ = o͝o	full — wool	ey = ā	prey — rate
ȳ = ī	fly — ice	aw = ô	caw — corn
y̆ = ĭ	hymn — him	au = ô	author — auto
ỹ = ẽ	martyr — sister	uy = ī	buy — ride
ai = ā	rain — mane	ui = ĭ	build — filled

Oi, with its equivalent oy, is a diphthong; so is ou, as in "out." Ou has an equivalent, ow. Long u and long i are really diphthongs. Long u equals ĭ-o͞o, while long i equals ä-ē.

Many mistakes in spelling arise from the fact that two different signs may stand for the same sound. It is not enough to know the sound of a word; we must know its form too.

Look intently; listen carefully. Find out, after any error in spelling, just why you made that mistake. Then master the misspelled word.

II. VARIOUS EXERCISES FOR GENERAL REVIEW AND FOR DRILL

1. Pronounce every word in the lesson.

2. Find rhymes for every word in the lesson.

3. Use in sentences each word of the lesson.

4. Write the words of the lesson in alphabetical order.

5. Find in reading book or geography ten words containing long a; long e; long i; long o; and two words containing long u. Write these words in lists in preparation for a spelling match in which they will be used.

6. Find in your reading book twenty words containing silent letters. Point out the silent letter or letters in each word of the list.

7. Find fifteen words ending in er. Write them in a list in alphabetical order. (The exercise may be repeated with final ing, ed, ful, el, le, and ion.)

8. Make all the words you can from the letters in the word indestructible. (Pupils may choose other words to be used in the same way.) Have the entire list written upon the board without repetitions.

9. Copy the words in the lesson. Draw a line through any silent vowel.

10. Place the correct diacritical marks, so far as you can, upon the vowels in Lessons 2 and 4, page 32.

11. Use in sentences of your own five pairs of words which are pronounced alike but spelled differently.

12. Make five groups of words like the following: "make," "makes," "making," "maker." Bring the words to the class to be compared, used in sentences, and spelled.

13. Make a list of twenty words beginning with any given letter. The words should differ as much as possible. Compare words to see if the letter has more than one sound.

Digitized by Google

14. Find in your reading book fifteen words containing obscure a. Write them in alphabetical order.

15. Write twenty words containing qu. Use the words in sentences.

16. Write ten words in which ph equals f.

17. Write twenty words containing soft c.

18. Write fifteen words beginning with a; the first five words of one syllable, the second five of two syllables, the third five of three syllables.

Make a neat list.

Exchange lists in class for a pronouncing match. Every word should be read very clearly and distinctly so that everybody hears and understands. Any pupil may be required to spell his entire list.

19. Make a list of twenty words beginning with two consonants; twenty words beginning with three consonants. Compare the lists in class.

20. Make a list of words ending in ct. See who can make the longest list.

21. Make a list of words containing o, as in "corn." (Mark each word with the proper diacritical mark.)

22. Read from any page of the reading book all the words containing silent e. Pronounce these words aloud, but these only. Every pupil may read until he fails. The reading should be rapid and clear. To skip a word is to fail.

23. Find in your reading book ten words of three syllables. Separate these words into their syllables.

24. Select from previous pages the twenty hardest words to be used in a spelling match. Prepare a neat list, arranging the words alphabetically.

25. Write ten words which rhyme with "eat," "cream," "dome." (Other words may be substituted.)

Digitized by Google

26. Find in reading book or speller ten words containing ck, gh, oi, au, ou, oa, ea, bl.

27. Find as many words as you can beginning with silent w. What letter always follows silent w?

28. Find as many words as you can ending with silent b; beginning with silent k; beginning with silent g; ending with ph.

29. Write twenty words containing s having the sound of z; c having the sound of k.

30. Write twenty words containing wh. Use the lists in the spelling match.

31. Add ed to words ending in d. Make as long a list as you can. Thus: "wound," "wounded"; "load," "loaded."

Do the same with words ending in t. See if the class together can make a pronouncing list of one hundred such words.

32. Make lists of words containing the phonograms ight, ought, ite, ote, and ing. Use the lists in a spelling match.

33. Make a list of words pronounced alike and spelled differently. Have a match in which these words must be used in sentences by anyone whose name is called.

34. Choose a paragraph in the reading book. Read it, speaking aloud, first, the words of one syllable, second, the words of two syllables, third, the words of three syllables, and so on.

35. Choose a paragraph from the reading book. Name the words in order, pronouncing after each word another word which rhymes with it.

36. Look rapidly through a page of the reading book, naming every word containing a given vowel or a given vowel sound. For example: a as in "gate," o as in "corn."

37. See who will be first to find on a given page, and to write in a list, all the words ending in ing.

This exercise may be varied to see who can make the longest list in three minutes, four minutes, etc.

III. CLASS EXERCISES (CONTESTS)

CONTEST IN MATCHING WORDS

Each pupil selects twenty-five words which are considered hard to spell, and carries his list to the class at the time of contest. Sides are chosen in the ordinary manner.

Number one begins by naming the first word upon his list in this manner: "I present 'foreign,' which I spell f-o-r-e-i-g-n." Number one on the opposite side must match the word. He may say: "I match it with 'foreigner,' a close relation, which I spell f-o-r-e-i-g-n-e-r." Or he may say: "I match it with 'reign,' spelled r-e-i-g-n, but my ei equals a, while yours equals short i."

The contest proceeds until everyone on the first side has presented a word to be matched by his opponent on the other side. Anyone who fails to spell correctly, or to match the word (if it can be matched), must take his seat. He leaves his list at the teacher's desk to be used if necessary by the pupils who stand the longest. The side having the largest number standing has won.

From such a set of lists prepared by students material may be prepared for a final contest. This will be a much more useful list than one prepared and printed in the spelling book, for every word will have been recognized by some pupil as presenting a real difficulty.

MATCHING DERIVATIVES

The pupil may select a list of root words from the pages in this spelling book. Sides will be chosen in the usual manner.

The teacher gives out the words from the list. The pupil must spell the word, use it in a sentence, name a derivative, and use the derivative in a sentence.

Digitized by Google

PRONOUNCING MATCH

a. Choose any page which has been studied.

b. Go down the line, each pupil pronouncing in turn a word on the page.

c. After every word has been pronounced, begin again, pronouncing each word and a rhyme for it.

Any pupil who pronounces incorrectly or who fails to name the required number of rhymes must take his seat. The match goes to three rhymes, four rhymes, five rhymes, until every pupil has failed, or until time is up. The pupil who stands the longest wins; or if the class is dismissed, the winning side is the side which has the greatest number standing.

DRILL IN PRONOUNCING

a. Choose any page which has been studied.

b. Beginning with the first word on the page, go rapidly down the line, each pupil naming another word having the same initial sound. Continue until no further words are suggested.

Two pupils should be accounted to keep tally, showing how many words have been named. A pupil whose word does not begin with the right sound must take his seat.

Proceed in the same way with the second word on the page.

The point is to think quickly, to name a large number of words having the given initial sound, to speak clearly so that everybody hears, and to use as many words on the page as possible.

(This game may be repeated, using the final sound. This is more difficult, because pupils will tend to name the final letter instead of the final sound.)

d. Choose a paragraph in the reading book. Pronounce every word in the paragraph. But after each word pronounce another word having the same initial sound.

IV. CUSTOMS IN SPELLING, WHICH GIVE US RULES FOR SPELLING

1. Certain groups or families of words are related in meaning; for example: "try," "tries," "tried," "trying," "trial." "Try" changes its form according to its use in the sentence; for example:

I will try to speak clearly.
Mary tries to speak clearly.
I am trying to speak clearly.
He failed in his first trial.

If you look carefully, you will see how these changes in form are made. Sometimes a syllable is added (as "try," "trying"); sometimes only a letter is added (as "tries," "tried"). In the latter case the y is changed to i. Let us see how this comes about.

want	wanted	try	try-ed (tried)
steam	steamed	carry	carry-ed (carried)

You will see that ed is added to "want," "try," "steam," and "carry" to indicate past time, but nobody speaks plainly enough to say "trȳ-ĕd," "carrȳ-ĕd." The two vowels ȳ, ĕ; ȳ, ĕ, are run together in rapid speaking and the words are pronounced "trīed," "carrīed."

2. In spelling, then, when the word ends in y, and we would add ed to show past time, the y changes to i before ed and no new syllable is added. Here are other examples:

marry	pity	hurry	worry
dally	whinny	rally	bury

This will show you how rules of spelling grow out of our habits of speaking or the sounds of words.

RULES FOR DERIVATIVES

1. When the root word ends with silent e, it drops the e before a suffix beginning with a vowel. Thus:

recite — reciting — recital face — facing — facial engage — engaged — engaging

EXCEPTIONS:

a. The e remains in the derivative before a, in order to preserve the soft sound of c or g. Thus:

peaceable — manageable

b. Some short words ending in oe or ye keep the final e before suffixes. Thus:

hoe — hoeing dye — dyeing

2. Words ending in silent e keep the e in derivatives if the suffix begins with a consonant. Thus:

defenseless — graceful — fineness

3. A few words drop the e before a suffix beginning with a consonant. Thus:

judgment — acknowledgment

4. Verbs ending in y retain the y before ing, but change to i in other derivatives. Thus:

try — trying — tried — trial

5. If final y is preceded by a vowel, it retains the y before all suffixes. Thus:

buy — buying — buyer
pray — prayed — praying — prayer

EXCEPTIONS:

said — laid — paid — daily

Digitized by Google

RULES FOR PLURALS

I. General rules for the formation of the plural.

1. Nouns ending in a consonant sound add s to the singular form to indicate more than one. Thus:

frog — frogs	barrel — barrels
tent — tents	battle — battles

2. When the final sound does not unite easily with s, es is added to form the plural. Thus:

match — matches	box — boxes
moss — mosses	wish — wishes
class — classes	bunch — bunches

II. Nouns ending in a vowel.

1. Nouns ending in y preceded by a consonant change y to i and add es for the plural. Thus:

lady — ladies	fairy — fairies
story — stories	injury — injuries

2. Nouns ending in y preceded by a vowel add s to form the plural. This is a regular plural and not an exceptional one. Thus:

valley — valleys	delay — delays
monkey — monkeys	Monday — Mondays

III. Irregular plurals.

1. Nouns ending in f usually add s to form the plural. Thus:

scarf — scarfs	muff — muffs

But the following nouns change final f or fe to ves in forming the plural:

calf	leaf	life	wolf
half	loaf	wife	thief
elf	sheaf	beef	knife

Digitized by Google

2. Nouns ending in o usually add s to form the plural.

zero — zeros piano — pianos

But many nouns ending in o add es. Thus:

potato — potatoes tomato — tomatoes

These exceptions must be learned one at a time as words are needed.

RULES FOR DOUBLE LETTERS

1. The final sound of f, l, s, and sometimes t or r, after a short vowel sound is usually indicated by a double consonant. Thus:

muff — bell — moss — butt — burr

After the short vowel sound in words of more than one syllable the r is doubled. Thus:

marry — merry — squirrel — hurry — sorry

2. Monosyllables ending in a single consonant preceded by a short vowel double the consonant before a suffix beginning with a vowel. Thus:

drop — dropped — dropping get — getting rot — rotten

3. Words of two or more syllables, accented on the final syllable, double the final consonant before suffixes. Thus:

occur — occurred — occurring — occurrence
repel — repelled — repelling — repellant

This is true only when the word ends in a single consonant preceded by a single vowel. Observe:

repeat — repeated — repeating condemn — condemned — condemning

V. A STANDARD TEST OF SPELLING ABILITY

The Measuring Scale for Ability in Spelling shown above was prepared by the Division of Education of the Russell Sage Foundation, New York City. It is reproduced here by the consent of the director. This scale, prepared by the foundation and for sale by them, contains lists of words under each lettered column. It was necessary in reproducing the scale on pages of this size to detach the columns of words from the scale. These columns will be found on the following pages, lettered to fit the scale. List A belongs below column A, list B below column B, and so on.

The data from which the scale was computed were secured from an aggregate of 1,400,000 spellings by 70,000 pupils in 84 different cities throughout the country. The words used in the list are 1000 in number. Previous studies have shown that these words are the 1000 commonest words in English writing.

All the words under any given letter are of equal difficulty in spelling. These lists are graded so that the steps from one to another are equal. The numbers beneath the letters indicate the percentage of correct spelling to be expected from each grade when tested by the words of that column.

The teacher may readily discover by the use of these lists the grade of spelling ability indicated by her class. If, for example, they are tested on words selected from column K, second-grade pupils should spell 58 per cent correctly; third-grade, 79 per cent; fourth-grade, 92 per cent; fifth-grade, 96 per cent; and sixth-grade, 99 per cent.

No better test can be given to insure accurate spelling of the words oftenest used, nor to fix the standard of spelling in grades. The list should be frequently used in review and drill, for errors in spelling, as experience shows, are usually found in greatest numbers in the use of this fundamental vocabulary.

VI. HOW TO STUDY SPELLING

Errors in spelling usually arise from one of three things:

1. The omission of silent letters.
2. The use of the wrong vowel equivalents. Thus: "sed" fer "said"; "strate" for "straight"; "wood" for "would"; "pain" for "pane."
3. Carelessness in observing the obscure vowels.

You will avoid these errors if you do four things:

1. Become perfectly familiar
   a. With the usual values of all the letters.
   b. With ordinary equivalents.
   c. With the extreme exceptions.
2. Look carefully at all words so that you will know them when you see them again, or remember them when you wish to write them.
3. Think about the meaning of the word, and observe words that are related in meaning. Thus:

   clamor — clamorous resign — resignation

4. Refer to your dictionary when you meet a new word or are doubtful about the use of a familiar one.

The study of words may become a delight which will continue as long as you continue to read and write. Your dictionary should be your guide, and you should become your own teacher.

VII. EXERCISES IN CLEAR SPEAKING

OLD "NONSENSE RHYMES"

Peter Piper picked a peck of pickled peppers;
A peck of pickled peppers Peter Piper picked;
If Peter Piper picked a peck of pickled peppers,
Where 's the peck of pickled peppers Peter Piper picked?

Thomas a Tattamus took two t's
To tie two tops to two tall trees;
To frighten the terrible Thomas a Tattamus!
Tell me how many T's there are in all That.

Robert Rowley rolled a round roll round,
A round roll Robert Rowley rolled round;
If Robert Rowley rolled a round roll round,
Where rolled the round roll Robert Rowley rolled round?

My grandmother sent me a new-fashioned three-cornered cambric country-cut handkerchief. Not an old-fashioned three-cornered cambric country-cut handkerchief, but a new-fashioned three-cornered cambric country-cut handkerchief.

When a Twister a-twisting will twist him a twist;
For the twisting of his twist, he three times doth entwist;
But if one of the twines of the twist do untwist,
The twine that untwisteth, untwisteth the twist.

One old Oxford ox opening oysters;
Two tee-totums totally tired of trying to trot to Tadbury;
Three tall tigers tippling tenpenny tea;
Four fat families fanning fainting flies;
Five foolish fellows fiercely fishing for frogs.
Six silly sportsmen simply shooting snipes;
Seven Severn salmons swallowing shrimps;
Eight Englishmen eagerly examining Europe;
Nine nimble noblemen nibbling nuts;
Ten tinkers tinkling upon ten tin tinder-boxes with tenpenny tacks.

FROM "THE PIED PIPER OF HAMELIN"

Into the street the Piper stept,
Smiling first a little smile;
To blow the pipe his lips he wrinkled,
And green and blue his sharp eyes twinkled.
Ere three shrill notes the pipe had uttered;
You heard as if an army muttered;
The muttering grew into a grumbling;
And the grumbling grew to a mighty rumbling;
And out of the houses the rats came tumbling —
Great rats, small rats, lean rats, brawny rats,
Brown rats, black rats, gray rats, tawny rats,
Grave old plodders, gay young friskers,
Fathers, mothers, uncles, cousins,
Families by tens and dozens,
Brothers, sisters, husbands, wives, —
Followed the Piper for their lives.

THE CATARACT OF LODORE

"How does the Water
Come down at Lodore?"
Here it comes sparkling,
And there it lies darkling;
Now smoking and frothing
Its tumult and wrath in,
Till in this rapid race
On which it is bent,
It reaches the place
Of its steep descent.
The Cataract strong then plunges along,
Striking and raging as if a war waging
Its caverns and rocks among;
Rising and leaping,
Sinking and creeping,
Swelling and sweeping,
Showering and springing,
Flying and flinging,
Writhing and ringing,
Eddying and whisking,
Spouting and frisking,
Turning and twisting,
Around and around
With endless rebound:
Smiting and fighting,
A sight to delight in;
Confounding, astounding,
Dizzying and deafening the ear with its sound.

Collecting, projecting,
Receding and speeding,
And shocking and rocking,
And darting and parting,
And threading and spreading,
And whizzing and hissing,
And dripping and skipping,
And hitting and splitting,
And shining and twining,
And rattling and battling,
And shaking and quaking,
And pouring and roaring,
And waving and raving,
And tossing and crossing,
And flowing and going,
And running and stunning,
And foaming and roaming,
And dinning and spinning,
And dropping and hopping,
And working and jerking,
And guggling and struggling,
And moaning and groaning;
And glittering and frittering,
And gathering and feathering,
And whitening and brightening,
And quivering and shivering,
And hurrying and skurrying,
And thundering and floundering;
And so never ending, but always descending,
The Water comes down at Lodore.
